THIE WHITTE HOUISE

The White House is the president's home, and also a workplace for the cabinet. Before it stood at its famous address at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., the president's house was in Philadelphia, which was the temporary capital while Washington, D.C. was being built. When John Adams moved into the White House in 1800, he became the first president to live there. In 1814, British troops set fire to it during the War of 1812, and it required minor reconstruction. By the middle of the century, it became clear that the White House would have to be expanded to accommodate all of the people who worked with the President over the course of the day. President Theodore Roosevelt built an office behind the White House in 1902, with workspaces for him and his employees, now known as the West Wing. Since then, many presidents have had special rooms put into the house during their stay, such as swimming pools, bowling alleys, and gyms. The White House is open for tours, but you must arrange them through your member of Congress.

Amelia Earhart's Plane

Amelia Earhart was a pioneer of flight and an important figure in women's equality. Aside from achieving many firsts in the aviation world, she was also the first woman to accomplish these feats and spent much of her career fighting for the acceptance of female pilots in aviation. Her plane, a Lockheed Vega 5B, is on display at the National Air and Space Museum. Earhart made two important flights in this plane: the first solo flight by a woman across the Atlantic in 1932, and later that year made the first solo nonstop flight by a woman across the U.S.

ILIIBIRAIRY OF CONGRESS

The Library of Congress began in 1800, when President Adams signed a bill that created a library for members of congress to use, containing only books that they might need to use for work. Unfortunately, the original collection was lost when the British burned down the U.S. Capitol during the War of 1812. An avid reader, former president Thomas Jefferson donated his collection of books to re-establish the nation's official library. Jefferson believed that all subjects were important to refer to, and suggested that the new Library of Congress keep materials on all subjects. The Library of Congress began collecting books of all kinds, as long as they were copyrighted in the U.S. After they began running out of space in the Capitol, a new building was built on the National Mall in 1886, where it stands today. The library also researches American life, documenting and keeping multimedia records of unique cultures, societies, and ways of life in the United States.

The Star-Spangled Banner

The Star-Spangled Banner is the flag that inspired Francis Scott Key to write the words that he would later set to the music that would become our national anthem. During the War of 1812, Key was detained on a British ship. He noticed the flag being raised early in the morning after a major battle, and was inspired by the sight to write "The Star-Spangled Banner". The song became popular with Union troops and supporters during the Civil War, and was made our official national anthem in 1931. The actual "star-spangled banner" that he saw from the ship is now on display at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL

Designed after the temples of Ancient Greece, the Lincoln Memorial was built as a tribute to our 16th president Abraham Lincoln, who many say is one of the greatest presidents in our nation's history. Lincoln successfully lead the country through the turmoil of the Civil War, and outlawed the cruel and unfair practice of slavery in the U.S. After Lincoln was assassinated in 1865, the public and government began thinking about a memorial to honor him. Work began on the Lincoln Memorial in 1914 and it was completed in 1922. Martin Luther King, Jr. made his famous "I Have A Dream" speech from the steps of the memorial in 1963. The Lincoln Memorial is located on the west end of the National Mall in Washington, D.C.
